Where is the first wind power plant installed in Ecuador?

Wind energy In Ecuador, the first wind power plant was installed in 2007 in the San Cristobal Island (Galapagos province). It consisted of three turbines with a total capacity of 2.4 MW. The project was carried out under an agreement between the Government of Ecuador and the Global Sustainable Electricity Partnership (GSEP) (former e7 Group).

How much power does Ecuador need a year?

Electricity demand grows by 200 MW every year, meaning Ecuador should add 250 MW or 300 MW of new power generation each year. However, Ecuador has added minimal additional generation in the last three years.

Why did the new energy plan not work in Ecuador?

The belief that promoted this new Plan was that the market, through its own forces, principles and dynamism, would encourage new companies to invest in electricity generation. However, the results were not satisfactory in Ecuador due to both insufficient interest of new companies and lack of fresh capital (CONELEC, 2007a).

Is hydrogen a viable energy source in Ecuador?

Even though hydrogen can be a pathway to produce energy by means of fuel cells or combustion engines during peak hours, it has been mentioned that the subsidies to energy (especially oil-derived fuels) in Ecuador will hinder the viability of incorporating hydrogen in the energy matrix of the country (Ponce-Jara et al., 2016).

How much electricity does Ecuador produce a year?

The Ecuadorian electricity generation capacity has grown at a relatively steady pace from 2006 to 2015, increasing the installed capacity by 1935 MW, which represents an average evolution of 3.2% per year. However, the installed capacity has doubled from 2015 to 2017, reaching 4207 MW.
